

Special Report:

Are you tired of fighting toenail fungus?

Can you catch toenail fungus from a pedicure?

Unfortunately, the answer is yes. We see many patients who have caught toenail fungus or other infections from a visit to a nail salon. How do you know that your salon is clean, and that you are getting a safe pedicure? One tip is to bring your own tools to each visit, or look for salons that will keep each customer's unique tools separate and labeled for your next visit. Look for shared tools that are being sterilized in an autoclave or proper disinfectant (typically turquoise colored liquid). Do not permit excessive cuticle cutting or any other treatment that is painful - scrapes and cuts increase the chance of infection. Watch to make sure that the foot baths are cleaned and sprayed down with disinfectant between each customer.

Is the laser treatment for toenail fungus painful?

Some people experience a small amount of discomfort, but the vast majority feels no pain. Some patients experience a heat sensation from the laser, sometimes a feeling like a quick pricking sensation. We use a cold air spray, and have some other techniques to keep them comfortable. Most people don't feel much at all, and the feeling diminishes as they continue their treatments.

Here are some unedited photos of patients who are receiving the Milwaukee Foot Specialists Laser Treatment Program. The top picture is the before and the bottom picture is the after. See for yourself the great results that are possible - don't suffer with Toenail Fungus any longer! This innovative treatment program is nearly painless, and requires NO downtime or surgery.
